FUTURE OF LEADERSHIP IS GENDER EQUAL

REGIONAL DIALOGUE

29-30 AUG 2019

BANGKOK, THAILAND

PULLMAN BANGKOK HOTEL G | 36TH FLOOR IN GALLERIES 1 & 2
BACKGROUND

As part of the Regional Project on “Promoting a fair business environment in ASEAN” (2018-2021), which aims at nurturing a culture of integrity in ASEAN public and private sectors for sustainable development, UNDP Bangkok Regional Hub is organizing a Regional Dialogue on The future of leadership is gender equal. UNDP also has a global programme - Gender Equality Award initiative which provides companies with diagnostics and support to create workplace equality through six key dimensions - gender diversity being a key aspect of this.

Gender equality is not only a fundamental human right, but a necessary foundation for a peaceful, prosperous and sustainable world. Sustainable Development cannot be achieved until women have equal access to decent work opportunities and are able to reach senior management and leadership positions.

The case for gender diversity in businesses and organizations has gained momentum across the globe. Board diversity initiatives are a growing area within good corporate governance practices, globally and in the Asia-Pacific region. There are several imperatives for ensuring greater diversity in leadership positions of small, medium and large companies.

Compelling research and advocacy have generated awareness and acceptance of the business case for greater gender diversity across all levels, and especially in senior management positions. There is also growing recognition that having more balanced board representation enhances firm performance by bringing in new and diverse insights, experiences, values and perspectives to complex problems and discussions in the boardroom and hence enables boards to make better (informed) decisions.

Women on boards have also been found to provide additional insight into consumer trends and priorities. This can be particularly relevant for consumer-focused corporations. Women make 70% of consumer purchasing choices, and with gender-diverse boards these corporations may have an advantage when making decisions that are more responsive to customers.

According to research carried out examining corporate performance of more than 1,500 companies across three main categories: environmental, social, and governance (ESG), companies with more women on their board of directors are more likely to: institute strong governance structures, demonstrate a high level of transparency, and avoid large-scale controversy. These companies are also likely to have clear policies to avoid corruption, build strong partnerships with local communities, and demonstrate high levels of disclosure and transparency.

Thus, the benefits of more gender equality in leadership positions are considerable not only for women, but for companies’ reputation, performance and countries’ economic growth. The linkages between women representation in managerial positions and boards and stronger corporate governance reinforces the need for gender diversity as part of greater transparency and promotion of integrity and accountability in business practices.

In Asia-Pacific, gender diversity on boards increased from 6% in 2011 to 13% in 2016, reflective of regulations and corporate policies instituted during this period. However, this is still low compared with the average share in advanced global economies which is at 28% (2016). Despite these statistics, it is encouraging to note that all-male boards are no longer a majority in the region, with a significant drop from 53.2% in 2012 to 39% in 2014, indicating the recognition for gender diversity at the board level. Evidence points towards the role that stock exchanges, government entities and regulators can play to gently encourage businesses to embrace changes towards greater gender diversity in boards and senior executive leadership.

OBJECTIVES

UNDP is committed to promoting gender equality, as part of its efforts to promote business integrity and sustainable practices in private and state-owned enterprises. UNDP will work with a number of stakeholders, from government and regulators, to industry and investors, as well as academia and advocacy groups that are part of making the change towards greater gender diversity in the boardroom and in senior executive leadership of companies.

To this end, UNDP is hosting its first private sector meeting focused on this critical issue, with the aim to:

- deliberate on existing challenges, potential solutions and share good practices
- identify tools that UNDP can offer to support the gender diversity agenda

PARTICIPANT PROFILE

- CEOs and Heads of HR/diversity leads from key companies
- UNDP colleagues from Bangkok Regional Hub and Country Offices
- Key government representatives and regulators to share good practices
- Academic and advocacy organizations working on gender diversity in leadership
- Recruitment agencies working for C-suite and board recruitment

Her passion for using design to transform organisations and businesses has led her to work with organisations of all sizes, across the fields of retail, F&B, hospitality, education, and government, in the design of services, processes, products and space. Combining a strong sense of aesthetics, understanding user needs and experience with engaging stakeholders and partners, Stephanie’s experience has resulted in driving business value, strategic alignment of values and organisational change amongst her clients.

Some of her work includes leading the consultant team to develop a new court user contact strategy for the State Courts and Family Justice Courts of Singapore. She also led the Sentosa Express Mobility Experience Design project, which involved working across an integrated guest experience, spanning from operational processes to branding and style elements, and ultimately to physical redessigns of two key train stations and train interiors. Her work with brands includes a new brand experience for Spinelli Coffee at One Raffles Quay, and the new Botanic Gardens Shops at Nassim and Tanglin gates.

Stephanie taught Design Thinking workshops for CHIJ Kellock, Singapore Chinese Girls School, Ministry of Education (HQ) teams, Changi Airport Group and also the faculty at the School of Design and Arts, College of St. Benilde in Manila. She has an additional 4 years’ experience teaching Design Studios at the University of California, Berkeley and the National University of Singapore.

Stephanie received a Bachelor of Science degree from MIT and a Master of Architecture from the University of California, Berkeley.
